Call me Ever Dream Cosplay.

Ever Dream Cosplay started 4 years ago when a photographer friend invited me to model for him and I arrived at the shoot dressed as a fairy. Since then, I have focused on improving my sewing skills and creating more complex costumes. Because I focus on fantasy looks, I have also developed skills in the construction of wings. I also try to work from a sustainable and cost effective model by sourcing my materials secondhand whenever possible.

With each new look I create and piece I complete, I learn more about the cosplay craft and my own abilities. I am most proud of my two most recent looks, the White Stag and Chandra, Dressed to Kill (based on the game Magic the Gathering). Every outfit I've made tells a part of my story of growth.

As I continue to improve, my goals are two-fold. First, I want to create costumes for others. I'd love to see others wearing my creations and feeling confident, no matter their age or appearance. Second, I want to continue to appear in magazines and share my work with others. As part of that, I hope to expand to working with other models in group shoots. I also want to improve my skills with make-up.

Ever Dream Cosplay is about continuing to dream and celebrate imagination at any age. It's about whimsy and fun, and I hope to continue to share these dreams for many years to come.
