When I was a child, I didn't like sport. At that time I didn't know martial arts yet. But it's never too late if you want to do something. Today I think my former sport teachers would be surprised!

So at 20 years old, I joined a Vietnamese martial arts club. There, I met my first master and kind people who helped me to improve. I first joined the club to do some sport, I didn't think martial arts would become a passion so fast. I practiced every day, as much traditional training as fight training. I like training hard to go of my limits.

Martial arts gave me confidence. I did national competition and I was a bronze medalist. Then I got the black belt. I went to train in Viet Nam and I got yellow Vietnamese belt.

Parallel to this external practice, I wanted to add a more inner dimension to my work and I started Tai Chi. I had sudden awareness of how Tai Chi is beneficial to health. Sometimes I was tired before training and after Tai Chi class I felt in good form!

Today, I still continue to practice Vietnamese martial arts and I'm proud and very happy to be a Tai Chi teacher in my own club! More than a passion, martial arts are a part of my life.
